

Hebrews 7:4-10 “Learning about Christ from Melchizedek”

Main Idea: Hebrews 7:4-10 uses Melchizedek to teach us about Christ, indeed, to challenge us to come to grips with the supremacy of Christ in our lives.

I. Big Idea #1: Melchizedek was great.

- A. Melchizedek received a tithe from Abraham (4-6a).
 1. The Law required that God’s people give to the Levitical priests.
 2. Melchizedek wasn’t a Levitical priest.
 3. Melchizedek received the gift, not because of a position he inherited, but because of who he was.
- B. Melchizedek gave a blessing to Abraham (6b-7).
 1. You need to know that Abraham received God’s promises.
 2. You need to know there’s someone greater than Abraham.
- C. Melchizedek is declared to be living (8).
 1. The problem with human priests is that they die.
 2. The need is for a priest who remains alive.
- D. Melchizedek, through Abraham, received a tithe from Levi (9-10).
 1. Be careful against worshipping your theological system.
 2. Make sure your system keeps the main thing the main thing.

II. Big Idea #2: Christ is the greatest.

- A. He is the priest who alone can take you to God.
- B. He is the king who alone deserves your trust and allegiance.

Make It Personal: Ask yourself the following questions...

1. What beliefs are you holding that need to change?
2. What practices are you following that need to change?
3. What most needs to happen today so that Christ is the greatest in your life?

How would you answer the question, “Of all your experiences in life, what have you enjoyed most?” Go ahead, write down your top three. I think of the privilege of meeting, marrying, and spending my life with Sherry, of bringing into the world and raising our two daughters, of shepherding this congregation for nearly twenty-one years, for starters. How about you? What may be quite revealing, however, is what didn’t make it on our list.

Joe Stowell, Cornerstone University’s new president, shares the following story in his recent book, I Would Follow Jesus:

The meal was just about finished when I leaned over and asked Billy Graham the question I had hoped to ask him all evening.

Martie and I had been seated next to Dr. Graham at a dinner for the staff and board of his organization. Billy, eighty at the time, was lucid and interesting. Wondering what he would say about his highest joys in life, I asked, “Of all your experiences in ministry, what have you enjoyed most?”

Then (thinking I might help him out a little), I quickly added, “Was it your time spent with presidents and heads of state? Or was it—”

Before I could finish my next sentence, Billy swept his hand across the tablecloth, as if to push my suggestions onto the floor.

“None of that,” he said. “But far the greatest joy of my life has been my fellowship with Jesus. Hearing Him speak to me, having Him guide me, sensing His presence with me and His power through me. This has been the highest pleasure of my life!”

It was spontaneous, unscripted, and clearly unrehearsed. There wasn’t even a pause.

With a life full of stellar experiences and worldwide fame behind him, it was simply Jesus who was on his mind and on his heart. His lifelong experience with Jesus had made its mark, and Billy was satisfied.”^[1]

We’re prone to get distracted, aren’t we? I know I am. Getting married, having kids, loving your work, all great blessings for sure. But these God-given gifts can so easily usurp the place of the Giver in our lives. Indeed, I’ll never be the kind of husband, father, and pastor God intended me to be as long as I’m fuzzy on the issue of what’s most important in my life.

That’s where the book of Hebrews can help us. The theme of Hebrews is the supremacy of Jesus Christ. The writer of this letter is seeking to encourage a group of people, Jewish converts to Christianity, who were wavering in their faith. They were getting distracted from their calling and even pondering going back to their old ways.

How do you help folks like that? As the writer demonstrates, you help them by showing them what they have in the matchless person of Jesus the Christ.

Who is Jesus? At the beginning of the book the writer announces that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the creator of the universe (1:2), the exact representation of God's being, the One who provided purification for man's sins and returned to His throne in heaven (1:3). As such He is superior to all other authority figures, including angels (as he teaches in chs 1-2), Moses (in chs 3-4), and the priests of Levi (chs 4-7).

If we have a small view of Jesus, we won't cherish Him as we ought, especially when the distractions come. We need to think rightly about Jesus, to see Him as the supreme one, and the writer of Hebrews says that Melchizedek can help us do that. Indeed, five times the writer of Hebrews declares that Christ is "a high priest forever, in the order of Melchizedek" (5:6, 10; 6:20; 7:11, 17).

Who is Melchizedek? In our God-breathed text, Hebrews 7:4-10, the Holy Spirit uses Melchizedek to teach us about Christ, indeed, to challenge us to come to grips with the supremacy of Christ in our lives. Our passage lays before us two big ideas.

I. Big Idea #1: Melchizedek was great.

Verse 4—"Just think how great he was." Please note that God's Word commands us to think about, to give attention to, to ponder the greatness of this mysterious man, Melchizedek. As we learned last time from verses 1-3, Melchizedek was the king and priest of Salem (Jerusalem) around the year 2,000 BC. Verse 3 indicates that "like the Son of God he remains a priest forever."

That phrase is key. What makes Melchizedek great, according to Hebrews, is a similarity he bears with the Son of God. Like the Son of God, he remains a priest. It doesn't say he is the Son of God, but that there's something about him that points us to the Son of God.

In biblical studies, the connection is summed up in the word type. The writer of Hebrews says that the Old Testament portrait of Melchizedek is a type of Christ.

Perhaps an illustration will help. We have two portraits hanging in our living room (painted by mouth by our dear sister in Christ and quadriplegic Nancy Rae Litteral), and it's not uncommon that when visitors come, the portraits capture their attention and they say, "Is that Julie and Katie?" And of course, the technical answer is, "No, that's not Julie and Katie," for those portraits are just that, portraits made of canvas and ink, and not real people. But we know what the visitor means. "Yes, that's Julie and Katie when they were little girls," and we're being truthful for a picture is a representation, a type, of a person.

Melchizedek is a type of Christ, a portrait that God the Holy Spirit painted into His Word hundreds of words prior to Christ's coming. Rather than using ink and canvas, the Holy Spirit used the life and actions of this ancient, Middle-eastern king-priest to foreshadow what the ultimate king-priest would accomplish.

Raymond Brown explains, "Although this particular use of typology may not be common today, it was thoroughly familiar to our author and to many of his contemporaries. We must try to enter into their thought world, and in doing so we shall realize how helpful this form of interpretation was to them. The occasional intricacy of his argument must not be allowed to obscure the commendability of his aim. He genuinely desires to magnify Christ and do it in such a way as to help his contemporaries to understand the superiority of Christ's priesthood when set alongside the Levitical priesthood."^[2]

The fact is, as the New Testament writers emphasized over and over, we can see Christ in the Old Testament. Raymond Brown says it well, "Old Testament Scripture is essentially Christ-centered... It eagerly anticipates his coming, it describes his earthly ministry, vividly relates the precise circumstances and eternal benefits of his death for mankind, and looks beyond itself to the eventual fulfillment of its finest hopes... It is a book about Christ. The Son of God dominates the word of God in both Testaments. The marks of Christ are clearly impressed on all its pages for those who have the eye to see them."^[3]

So if you want to know Christ better, here's something you can do. Think about Melchizedek. Just think how great he was, says Hebrews. And to help us, the writer points out four indicators of Melchizedek's greatness.

A. Melchizedek received a tithe from Abraham (4-6a). Verse 4—"Just think how great he was: Even the patriarch Abraham gave him a tenth of the plunder!"

Nearly half the world's population would attest to Abraham's greatness—Jews, Christians, even Muslims venerate him. Even children sing songs about him (I can still remember marching to "Father Abraham had many sons"). His name appears 294 times in our Bibles. He's the patriarch.^[4]

But Melchizedek? We're told very little about him—he's mentioned in only three passages. Yet Abraham gave him a tithe. When Abraham returned from rescuing his nephew Lot in the battle described in Genesis 14, the king of Jerusalem met him with bread and wine. And Abraham responded by giving him a tenth of all the "plunder." The Greek word for 'plunder' (akrothinion) is comprised of two smaller words: akros ('top') and this ('heap'), literally, "the top of the pile." In other words, Abraham gave Melchizedek the first and the best part of the goods.

Having said that, the writer of Hebrews reminds his readers what the Mosaic law said about tithing in verse 5, "Now the law requires"—that's the way the Law works. It's black and white. It sets down requirements, and here's one...

1. The Law required that God's people give to the Levitical priests. Verse 5 continues, "Now the law requires the descendants of Levi who become priests to collect a tenth from the people—that is, their brothers—even though their brothers are descended from Abraham."

When Joshua conquered and distributed the promised land, the Levites, unlike the rest of the tribes, were not given an inheritance of land. Instead, they were allotted several cities, along with the promise that their fellow Israelites would support them by tithes.^[5] And so, if you were a Jew, you'd give the first ten percent of all your produce, of all your income, to the Levites, as an expression of worship in obedience to God's Word.

The Bible actually has a lot to say about giving. God is a giving God who is the source of every good gift we enjoy (James 1:17). And of course ultimately He gave us His Son. What's more, our giving God commands us to give, first to Him, and then to others. Proverbs 3:9-10 teaches, "Honor the LORD with your wealth, with the firstfruits of all your crops; then your barns will be filled to overflowing, and your vats will brim over with new wine." The prophet Malachi rebuked God's people for not giving, saying they were "robbing God" by failing to bring their tithes and offerings to Him (Mal. 3:8). Haggai rebuked God's people, pointing out they had enough money to build their own houses but were skimping on God's house (Hag. 1:9). Paul offered this counsel to the new covenant people of God in 2 Corinthians 9:7, "Each man should give what he has decided in his heart to give, not reluctantly or under compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver."

Do you appreciate God and what He's given you? If you do, then His Word says that one of the ways to show that you appreciate Him (and appreciate Him even more than the things He's given you) is to give the first part back to Him. Giving is an act of worship. Giving is an act of obedience. Again, in the Law giving wasn't optional. If you were a Jew, the Law required that you give to the Levitical priests.

Now notice verse 6, "This man [Melchizedek], however, did not trace his descent from Levi, yet he collected a tenth from Abraham..." The fact is...

2. Melchizedek wasn't a Levitical priest. He actually pre-dated the Levitical priesthood by six hundred years. The instructions about tithing in the Torah hadn't even been written yet (which indicates tithing was happening in the world before the Mosaic Law stipulated it), yet Abraham brought a tithe of his income to this priest. And priest-king Melchizedek accepted it. How do you explain that?

3. Melchizedek received the gift, not because of a position he inherited, but because of who he was. Remember, one of the objections these Jewish Christians were hearing from their critics was, "You've turned your back on the priesthood that God Himself established. You don't have a priest to represent you before God."

Quite frankly, many of us have trouble appreciating this accusation. We've been democratized. We think we have inalienable rights with God. "So what if I don't have a priest? I'm a good guy. God loves me. I can approach God directly, can't I?"

Can you? What does God's Word say? Jesus said in Matthew 5:8, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they will see God." Do you have a pure heart, one that's free from sinful thoughts, motivations, and aspirations? If you do, then you can see God and you don't need a priest. But that's our problem, isn't it? Concerning mankind the Lord said in Genesis 8:21, "Every inclination of his heart is evil from childhood."^[6] That's why God graciously established the Levitical priesthood in the first place. Sinful human beings cannot approach a holy God. They need a bridge builder, a go-between a priest.

But must that priest be a Levite in order to qualify, as the first century critics were saying? The writer of Hebrews says no, and he uses the Hebrew Scriptures to prove the point. Melchizedek wasn't a Levite, yet he was a priest, one that received an offering from the patriarch Abraham himself. And he received the gift, not because of a position he inherited, but because of who he was.

"Just think about how great he was," says the writer. John Calvin offers this helpful perspective concerning the greatness of Melchizedek, "It was no ordinary occurrence that in a country possessed by so many pagan superstitions a man was found who held to the pure worship of God. He was the neighbor on the one hand of Sodom and Gomorrah, and on the other of the Canaanites, so that on every side he was hedged about by unholy men. Moreover the whole world had so fallen into godlessness that it was scarcely believable that God was truly worshipped anywhere but in the family of Abraham...It was therefore quite remarkable that there was still a king who not only preserved true religion, but himself performed the office of a priest. It was certainly necessary that everything excellent should be found in the one who was the type of the Son of God.”^[7]

In verses 6-7 the writer mentions a second indicator of the greatness of Melchizedek.

B. Melchizedek gave a blessing to Abraham (6b-7). “This man, however, did not trace his descent from Levi, yet he collected a tenth from Abraham and blessed him who had the promises. And without doubt the lesser person is blessed by the greater.”

To appreciate this comparison, you need to know two things. First...

1. You need to know that Abraham received God's promises. Abraham is the lynchpin of the whole redemptive plan of God. After destroying the wicked world in the flood and scattering the rebel world at Babel, the Lord chose Abraham and gave him these promises, recorded in Genesis 12:2-3, “I will make you into a great nation and I will bless you; I will make your name great, and you will be a blessing. I will bless those who bless you, and whoever curses you I will curse; and all peoples on earth will be blessed through you.”

Through you, said God to Abraham. I’m going to bless the world through you. I’m going to give you a son, and through that son I’m going to form a nation, and through that nation I’m going to bless all the peoples of the world.

Those were God’s promises, and he gave them to Abraham. And yet as important as Abraham was and is in God’s redemptive plan...

2. You need to know there's someone greater than Abraham. The one who gives the blessing is greater than the one who receives it, right? To give anything, you must first possess it. To give a divine blessing, you must have the authority and clout of God Himself. “Blessed be Abram by God Most High, Creator of heaven and earth,” said Melchizedek in Genesis 14:19. This priest could not have offered that blessing had not he possessed the authority to give it.

“But suppose he didn’t. Suppose Melchizedek gave that blessing without the Lord’s approval. Can we be sure he wasn’t a fraud like Baalam who used the Lord’s name in vain?” Yes, we can be sure. How? Yahweh Himself gave testimony to the validity of Melchizedek’s blessing in Psalm 110:4, “The LORD [Yahweh] has sworn and will not change his mind [here is the Lord’s assessment]: ‘You are a priest forever, in the order of Melchizedek.’”

“We are Abraham’s seed,” the critics were saying. That’s fine, said the writer of Hebrews, for Abraham was a great man who received God’s promises. But even Abraham acknowledged there was a priest, a non-Levitical priest, greater than him.

How great was Melchizedek? Not only did he receive a tithe from Abraham and give a blessing to Abraham, but thirdly...

C. Melchizedek is declared to be living (8). “In the one case, the tenth is collected by men who die; but in the other case, by him who is declared to be living.”

The writer of Hebrews is making a contrast here. In the one case, he says referring to how things functioned under the Mosaic law, the Levitical priests collected the tithes from the Israelites. But all those men have something in common, namely, they die. Indeed...

1. The problem with human priests is that they die. He could help you today, but be dead tomorrow. And that’s the way it was for fourteen centuries, from the first priest Aaron right on to the first century. They all died.

2. The need is for a priest who remains alive. Notice the other side of the contrast. But in the other case—now the writer is referring to Melchizedek. He too collected a tithe, but unlike the Levitical priests who died, Melchizedek is “declared to be living.” That’s because when you read Genesis 14 you find no record that Melchizedek died. He just appears in the narrative, blesses Abraham, and then passes from the scene. There’s no genealogical record of his birth, nor his death, not because he wasn’t born (or he wouldn’t be human), and not because he didn’t die (for all humans die, as Heb. 9:27 emphasizes), but merely because the Holy Spirit didn’t guide Moses to include that information in the inspired text.

Leon Morris observes, “The writer does not say that Melchizedek lives on but that the testimony about him is that he lives. Once more he is emphasizing the silences of Scripture to bring out his point.”^[8]

When you read the account of Melchizedek in Genesis 14, you don’t read that he died. From appearances he’s just as alive when he exits the story as when he entered it. As such, he’s provides a beautiful portrait, a type, of another priest who would one day come, live, and remain alive. And not just because the biblical text didn’t tell the rest of this priest’s story, for it did. This priest did die, and this priest conquered the grave, and this priest lives and remains forever a high priest in the order of Melchizedek.

But there’s one more indicator of the greatness of the type...

D. Melchizedek, through Abraham, received a tithe from Levi (9-10). “One might even say that Levi, who collects the tenth, paid the tenth through Abraham, because when Melchizedek met Abraham, Levi was still in the body of his ancestor.”

Put on your thinking caps to follow the writer’s reasoning. His beginning phrase, “one might even say,” is unusual. Morris explains that this expression “serves to introduce a statement which may startle a reader, and which requires to be guarded from misinterpretation.”^[9] Gromacki says, “The author...declared a biblical truth which could never be detected from the historical events or characters.”^[10]

And what is that truth you never would pick up merely from reading the Genesis 14 account? That Levi was there, paying the tithe to Melchizedek. But how could that be? Levi was Abraham’s great-grandson, from whose tribe the priesthood later came. But we don’t even read about Levi’s birth until Genesis 29:34. When Abraham brought the tithe to Melchizedek, he didn’t even have a son yet, let alone a great-grandson! There’s no way Levi paid the tithe to Melchizedek, was there? He wasn’t there, was he?

Yes, says the writer of Hebrews, in a way he was there. As the KJV puts it, “He was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedec met him.”

This isn’t the first time the Bible indicates a connection between a person and his ancestors or descendants. Here’s an example. Rebekah was told in Genesis 25:23, “Two nations are in your womb [not just ‘sons’ but ‘nations’].”

Here’s another example, the ultimate one, for Paul explains in 1 Corinthians 15:22, “In Adam all die.” And in Romans 5:12, “Therefore, just as sin entered the world through one man, and death through sin, and in this way death came to all men, because all sinned.” So Adam, as theologians often put it, was our federal head. When he sinned, we were there. He was acting as our representative.

You say, “I don’t like this doctrine of federal headship. I don’t like the thought that someone else can act as my representative. It’s not fair.” For starters, something isn’t not true just because we don’t like it, is it? But I believe you do like it, if you’re God’s child, that is, for it’s the hope of your salvation. Just five verses later Paul says this in Romans 5:17, “For if, by the trespass of the one man, death reigned through that one man [the federal headship of Adam], how much more will those who receive God’s abundant provision of grace and of the gift of righteousness reign in life through the one man, Jesus Christ.”

Just as Adam acted as our representative, so did Christ. The only difference, as Paul puts it, is that you must receive God’s provision of grace in Christ to benefit from His work. You must put your faith in Christ, as Paul explained in Galatians 2:20, “I have been crucified with Christ and I no longer live, but Christ lives in me. The life I live in the body, I live by faith in the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me.” Notice again, when Christ died, we who have been born again were there in Him. When Christ was raised from the dead, we were raised up in Him.

Now back to the point the writer of Hebrews is making. Melchizedek, through Abraham, received a tithe from Levi. Philip Hughes put it this way, “‘Just as when Adam sinned those who were in his loins sinned, so when Abraham paid tithes those who were in his loins were tithed.’ Both seminally and by representation Levi was present in the person of his great-grandfather on this occasion.”^[11]

I don’t know how all this strikes you, but put yourself in first century shoes for a moment. Many then rejected Christ simply because He didn’t fit their theological system. They couldn’t bear the thought of leaving the Levitical system with its priests and offerings. These folks had their well organized traditions in place, and Christ simply didn’t fit. What about you? I offer this word of caution...

1. Be careful against worshipping your theological system. Should we have theological systems? Sure, just like a builder needs a scaffolding. But at times a builder needs to move his scaffolding, and when the house is done he takes it down.^[12]

I benefit from theological systems and use them. I would call myself a modified dispensationalist. I believe in the pre-millennial, pre-tribulational rapture position. In terms of soteriology, I believe in the position articulated by reformed theology. In terms of my view of the Bible, I embrace a nouthetic approach to counseling. I believe those things, but I need to exercise caution, and so do you. We must guard ourselves against worshipping our theological systems. A mob put Jesus on a cross because He didn’t fit their theological system. Again, systems, like scaffolding, are fine. But...

2. Make sure your system keeps the main thing the main thing. And that brings us to our second big idea. Big idea #1—Melchizedek was great.

II. Big Idea #2: Christ is the greatest.

It’s easy to get lost in the details of Hebrews 7. Thankfully, the writer himself gives us the big idea in Hebrews

8:1, “The point of what we are saying is this: We do have such a high priest, who sat down at the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in heaven.” There’s the point of Hebrews 7. Yes, we need to think about Melchizedek, for he was a great priest-king. But Christ is the greatest!

A. He is the priest who alone can take you to God. Jesus Himself announced that no one can come to God except through Him (John 14:6). Peter put it this way in Acts 4:12, “Salvation is found in no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given to men by which we must be saved.” Jesus Christ is the priest who can alone take you to God, and He can do that because He is a living priest. An empty grave is there to prove that He lives. But not only is He a priest...

B. He is the king who alone deserves your trust and allegiance. Concerning Jesus Christ Revelation 1:5 announces, “Who is the faithful witness, the firstborn from the dead, and the ruler of the kings of the earth.” He is the king of kings.

Earlier I shared a story about Billy Graham as told by Joe Stowell. Now let’s consider a story, also told by Joe Stowell, about one of Billy’s friends, Chuck Templeton. According to Stowell, Mr. Templeton was nearly a household name in evangelical homes back in the fifties and sixties. He pastored one of Toronto’s leading churches and, along with Billy Graham, helped found Youth for Christ in Canada. After pointing out that Pastor Templeton was in great demand as a speaker all over North America, Dr. Stowell writes the following:

But I don’t remember him for his stellar gifts. I remember him for his renunciation of the faith. Evangelicals everywhere were rocked by the news that Chuck Templeton had left his church and renounced all he had previously embraced and proclaimed. The former preacher went on to fame and fortune. He managed two of Canada’s leading newspapers, worked his way into an influential position with the Canadian Broadcasting Company—even took a run at the prime minister’s office.

It had been decades since I’d thought of Chuck Templeton. So imagine my surprise when I noticed he had been interviewed by Lee Strobel in his book The Case for Faith. After reading Templeton’s most recent book, Farewell to God: My Reasons for Rejecting the Christian Faith, Strobel caught a plane to Toronto to meet with him. Though eighty-three and in declining health, the former preacher vigorously defended his agnostic rejection of a God who claimed to be love, yet allowed suffering across the world to go unchecked.

Then, toward the end of their time together, Strobel asked Templeton point-blank how he felt about Jesus. Instantly, the old man softened. He spoke in adoring terms about Jesus, concluding, “In my view He is the most important human being who has ever existed.” Then as his voice began to crack, he haltingly said, “I...miss... Him!” With that, Strobel writes, tears flooded Templeton’s eyes, and his shoulders bobbed as he wept.

[And then Stowell concludes...] Think of it. Billy Graham and Chuck Templeton, two friends who chose radically different paths through life. And near the end of their journeys, one has found Jesus to be his most prized possession, while the other weeps for having left Him long ago.”^[13]

Make It Personal: Ask yourself the following questions...

1. What beliefs are you holding that need to change? The first readers of Hebrews had competing beliefs. Past religious traditions or Christ. Which will it be? How about you? Are you clinging to beliefs that need to change?

2. What practices are you following that need to change? Again, the first readers of Hebrews were struggling. Should we go back to our old ways where it’s safe and secure, or do we follow Christ, no matter the cost? What practices need to change in your life?

3. What most needs to happen today so that Christ is the greatest in your life? It’s easy to say we believe He’s great, but how will you show it today?
