

Main Idea: When you're in mercy's grip you will respond in two very practical ways according to Romans 12:1-2.

I. When motivated by mercy, you will use your body for God (1).

- A. It's appropriate.
- B. It's amazing.
 - 1. God wants your body.
 - 2. God wants it just the way it is.
- C. It's an act of worship.
 - 1. True worship is week-long.
 - 2. True worship is a life surrendered to God.

II. When motivated by mercy, you will use your mind for God (2).

- A. We must reject the world's pattern.
 - 1. Self-advancement must go.
 - 2. Self-indulgence must go.
- B. We must accept the will of God.
 - 1. This will affect your thinking.
 - 2. This will affect your choices.

Make It Personal: Am I motivated by mercy?

- 1. Is it obvious that my body is surrendered to God?
- 2. Is it obvious that my mind is being changed by God?

The new year is just around the corner. How shall we approach it? Specifically, what should our motivation be as we approach the opportunities before us in 2014? Duty? The grim determination to do better? There's a higher motivation, one that exalts God rather than the hard worker.

The apostle Paul used a phrase in Romans 12:1 that indicates his motivation, and what should be ours. He writes, “In view of God's mercy.”

If you asked Paul, “Paul, how do you live? What drives you to accomplish so much?” Here's what he would say. It's the mercy of God. In fact, that's what he did say over and over in his letters.

In Romans 11:30-31 he elaborated on this appreciation for mercy, saying, “Just as you who were at one time disobedient to God have now received mercy as a result of their disobedience, so they too have now become disobedient in order that they too may now receive mercy as a result of God's mercy to you.”

Earlier in Romans 9:23 the apostle summed it up by referring to believers as “the objects of His mercy.”

Yes, Paul loved to think and talk about mercy. It's what made him tick. He says in Titus 3:4-5, “But when the kindness and love of God our Savior appeared, he saved us, not because of righteous things we had done, but because of his mercy.”

Last week I finished Jerry Jenkins' novel, I, Saul. If you know anything about Saul, we know him better as Paul, you know life was hard for him.

[Read from the novel the account when Paul was in the Mamartine prison]

What kept Paul going? Fear? No. Sheer determination? No. Again, mercy did. He said in 2 Corinthians 4:1, “Therefore, since through God's mercy we have this ministry, we do not lose heart.”

That's the motivation we too need. Which is why I've entitled this message, “Motivated by Mercy in 2014.” Our text will be Romans 12:1-2.

What does it look like when a person is motivated by mercy? According Romans 12:1-2, it will show up in two obvious ways. You'll notice two key words in the text (you might circle them). In verse 1, it's the word "bodies." In verse 2 it's the word "mind." Being motivated by mercy affects both your body and your mind. How so? Let's find out.

I. When motivated by mercy, you will use your body for God (1).

Listen to our text, "Therefore, I urge you, brothers, in view of God's mercy, to offer your bodies as living sacrifices, holy and pleasing to God--this is your spiritual act of worship. Do not conform any longer to the pattern of this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Then you will be able to test and approve what God's will is—his good, pleasing, and perfect will."

Before us is a familiar text, and it should be. We should return to this passage often as Christians. Notice it's intended for "brothers," that is, for Christians, people who have experienced firsthand the mercy of God. This text offers us a precise call to a life of dedication to our Saving God.

I must warn you at the outset that this text may unnerve you. It may unsettle you. It may upset the apple-cart of your comfortable life. This is a text that confronts our tendency to coast and calls for a radical dedication.

"What's involved in dedication?" you ask. In verse 1, we'll discover three aspects of true dedication from God's perspective.

A. It's appropriate. It's the right thing to do, as we'll see.

We are looking, of course, at the book of Romans, a book which is perhaps the highpoint of theology in the New Testament. You'll notice chapter 12 begins, "Therefore." That word becomes the fulcrum of the book. The doctrine of chapters 1-11 leads to duty in chapters 12-16. Romans 1-11 tells us what a righteous God has done to make us right with Him. Romans 12-16 tells us what we should do in light of what He has done.

You say, "What has God done?" Let's walk through Romans to be reminded.

According to 1:18, He revealed His wrath against this godless world, missing no one. According to chapters 1-3, His righteous judgment affected every living person, including the heathen (ch. 1), the humanist and the Hebrew (ch. 2).

Friends, our basic problem as human beings is that God is holy, and we are not. We lack what it takes to live in a right relationship with a holy God. We lack righteousness. The message of Romans is what God did to give sinners like us what we couldn't earn and desperately needed.

Chapter 3 indicates that through the atoning work of Christ, God declares righteous all who will trust in His Son. Justification, according to chapters 4-5, is attained by faith in Christ alone, apart from human effort.

That's not all God has done for us. In addition to justifying those who trust in Christ, He sanctifies them. That is, He transforms their lives, as Paul explains in chapters 6-8. And lest we become proud as the beneficiaries of God's salvation, chapters 9-11 inform us that salvation is based on God's sovereign choice. From eternity past, God chose the Jews as His special people, and He chose undeserving Gentiles like us to be grafted in to His redemptive program.

How do you sum up what God has done for us? Paul does it with one word. Mercy. "Therefore, I urge you, brothers, in view of God's mercy."

Mercy. The Greek term is oiktirmos. It signifies inward feelings of compassion and sympathy, even pity. In 2 Corinthians 1:3 Paul uses the same word to identify God as “the Father of compassion.”

This is intrinsic to God’s character, beloved. He is a God who didn't give us what we deserved. That's His mercy. The truth that people like us who were once under God's wrath are now in His family and can pray, "Abba, Father." That's mercy. The realization that Christ took our place so we could enjoy the presence of God forever. That, my friend, is mercy.

Do you think much about mercy? Paul did. He was gripped by mercy. And what happens when a person has been gripped by mercy? He dedicates his life to the One who showed him mercy. It's the appropriate thing to do.

Seven-year-old Billy sat on the couch with his eyes glued to the ground. He knew what was coming. He knew he deserved it, too. He'd broken his father's antique clock while bouncing his basketball in the living room (an activity he knew to be forbidden in his household).

His father spoke firmly, "Billy, what you did was wrong. You disobeyed me. Your sin hurt your mother and me deeply."

"I know, Dad. I know what I deserve, too," Billy said solemnly. "I should be punished for what I did."

"You're right," the father replied. "You should be. For what you've done, you deserve to be punished. But I'm not going to. I'm going to show you mercy this time. There will be no punishment. You may go."

Answer this. How do you think you'd feel if you were Billy? I propose you'd hop down off that couch and into your daddy's lap, and blurt out, "Oh, daddy, thank you, thank you. I'll never do it again! You're the greatest!"

You see, dedication flows out of a person who has been gripped by mercy. It's the appropriate thing to do. Secondly...

B. It's amazing.

Last week I was on Google Earth looking at satellite images of the area and marveling at what we can see today that we couldn't see just a few years ago. Frankly, it's hard for people to be amazed anymore. We turn on our television sets and watch the launch of space shuttles, the signing of multi-million-dollar contracts by professional athletes, and we become numbed to the awesome.

But if you want to come face to face with something really amazing, then ponder two truths from verse 2.

1. God wants your body. "I beseech you therefore, brethren [as the KJV puts it], by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice."

"I urge you," the verse begins. Paul is doing more than teaching us. He's beseeching us. He's pleading with us. He's exhorting us to do something. With what? Our soma (Greek), our bodies. Yes, he invites us to offer our bodies to God. A Greek would never say that. To the Greek, what mattered was the spirit; the body was only a prison-house. But the Bible teaches that the body belongs to God just as much as the spirit does.

The verb "offer" (KJV "present") is in the aorist tense which stresses the decisiveness of the act. This isn't something we do over and over with continual renegeing. This is a life-changing dedication, a once-and-for-all presentation.

In Israel, before a priest could minister on behalf of others, he had to consecrate himself to God by offering sacrifices to God that were without blemish (Mal. 1:8-13). In the Old Testament economy, thousands of lambs were offered to God. But what does God want from us? Don't miss this. He wants our bodies.

Does it surprise you that God would want that, your body? For one thing, God owns everything. Why would He want our bodies? Think of it. Your body is the seat of what Paul elsewhere calls "the flesh" (Rom. 6:6, 12), that antagonistic propensity we have that resists God and God's ways. Your body is the instrument that yields to temptation.

You say, "Why would God want my body? It snores. It has a bad heart. It aches when I wake up in the morning. It's always causing me problems. My spirit, now that's a different story! I worship God with my spirit. I have good intentions in the depth of my unseen soul and spirit. But my body? My body doesn't cooperate with my spirit. Surely God wouldn't want my body."

But He does. And that's not all that's amazing. Here's a second amazing truth about your body.

2. God wants it just the way it is. "Offer your bodies as living sacrifices," Paul admonishes. God's Word doesn't tell us to get cleaned up and patch up the brokenness of our bodies before we give them to God. No. It says, "Give God your body--with all its problems, with all its tendency to temptation--give it to God just the way it is."

Ray Stedman says it well, "I don't know how this affects you, but it encourages me greatly. All other religions tell us we must clean up our lives first, and then offer them to God. God never talks that way. He says, 'Come to me just the way you are. I am the answer to your problems; therefore, start with me. You can't handle those problems yourself. Don't start with the idea that you have to straighten them out. Come to me, because I have the answers.'"

That's what John Newton, the man who wrote "Amazing Grace," did. He was converted on March 10, 1748, and later said, "I went to Africa that I might be able to sin to my heart's content. I was a wild beast on the coast of Africa till the Lord caught and tamed me."

Yes, God's grace and mercy are amazing, and so is the fact that He would even want us to surrender our bodies to Him. Dedication is appropriate, amazing, and thirdly...

C. It's an act of worship. "I urge you...to offer your bodies as living sacrifices, holy and pleasing to God--this is your spiritual act of worship." In the Greek text, the final phrase is unclear. The KJV translation says that we are to present our bodies as a living sacrifice "which is your reasonable service."

The word translated "worship" (or "service") has an interesting history. It is latreia, which originally meant "to work for hire or pay."² It referred to a laboring man giving his strength to an employer in return for the pay he would receive. It denotes, not slavery, but the voluntary undertaking of work. In time, the word came to mean "that to which a man gives his whole life." It's the idea of dedication.

In the Bible, the word refers to giving service and worship to God. This is key, and reveals two implications for us concerning true worship.

1. True worship is week-long. True worship is offering to God your body. Sometimes we equate worship with what happens inside a church building, but that's too narrow. According to the Bible, worship does not start nor end in church. We are worshipping or not worshipping all week long, depending on what we are doing with our body.

²see Barclay, p. 156-7.

The KJV uses the adjective "reasonable." It is our "reasonable service" to offer God our bodies. The Greek term can be translated "logical" or as the NIV states, "spiritual." Do you realize that using your body for God at work is just as much an act of worship as using your vocal cords to sing in church?

A few years ago I talked to a old friend from High School. I began the conversation, saying, "Hey, you haven't changed much!" To which he responded, "I sure hope I have!" And indeed, he had, for the Lord had transformed him.

He told me he had left a good job with an established construction company to start his own business with a Christian friend. I asked him why. He replied, "I was making a good living before, but I was bothered by the company's attitude towards money. I wanted to see my effort and the company's money be used for God's glory, not to line the pockets of a self-focused owner. So we started a new company with that commitment. It's been great!"

Do you see your job as a way to worship God? We say, "I'm going to church today to worship God," and so we should. But we should also be able to say, "I'm going to the A-plant today to worship God." Or, "I'm going to the school today to worship God." Or to the office, or the gym, or the woodshop. Why? Because from God's perspective, true worship happens all week-long.

Another implication...

2. True worship is a life surrendered to God. Paul uses three adjectives to describe the kind of sacrifice we should present to God. It's to be "living" (as opposed to mere ritual), "holy" (pure, set-apart), and "pleasing" to God (i.e. acceptable--what really matters is not what people think about what we do with our bodies, but what God thinks).

Let me ask you something. Have you surrendered your body to God? You see, worship is allowing God to use your body for His honor wherever you are. At work. In the lunchroom. On the ball court. In the music studio. In the living room. Worship is the surrender of your body to God seven days a week.

Be honest. Do you view your body as God's or yours? You see, if you are a Christian, your body belongs to God. It's not yours (1 Cor 6:19). But God invites you to offer it to Him willingly. Which is what we will want to do if we've been gripped by mercy.

So who controls your body really? As you enter this new year I charge you, resolve to use your body for God. It's the natural thing to do if we're motivated by mercy.

Perhaps you're thinking, "Wait. I do want to please the Lord with my body. I have dedicated my life to Him. Why do I still struggle in my Christian walk?" Because verse 2 says, dedication isn't the end. The grip of mercy must affect something in addition to your body. What is it? Verse 2 tells us.

II. When motivated by mercy, you will use your mind for God (2).

Verse 2—"Do not conform any longer to the pattern of this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Then you will be able to test and approve what God's will is--his good, pleasing, and perfect will."

Lest we think, "This talk about giving our bodies to God is pie-in-the-sky, by-and-by," God's Word becomes very specific in verse 2. It's as if the Lord says, "Once you offer your body to Me, I'll take it. You can come to Me just as you are. But I won't let you remain that way. I'm going to change you. I'm going to transform you. And in this transformation process, you have some responsibilities, two of them, both involving your mind."

Here's what we must do as people under the grip of mercy, two responsibilities...

A. We must reject the world's pattern. "Do not conform any longer to the pattern of this world." Some people at this point begin to think, "Oh, I know what that is. It means don't smoke, or drink, or wear certain clothes into a church building, right?"

Nothing wrong with having personal convictions, but if you think Paul has in mind some kind of "do's-and-don'ts" list in verse 2, you've missed it. I know people who've given up the above-mentioned "vices," yet who are saturated by the spirit of the world. And that's what the word "world" means in verse 2—the pattern and outlook of this age. The Greek term is aion. The literal rendering is, "Do not be conformed to the schemes of this world."

Fellow Christian, the schemes of this world never change. We might say the "wrapping paper" changes, but what's in the box is the same for us as it was for Paul. The spirit of this age is the advancement of self. We find ourselves in a world full of people who live to advance self. Verse 2 is calling us to get rid of a whole lot more than a few bad habits. It's the very spirit of this age we must deny.

Let me be specific. If we are to reject the world's pattern, we must eliminate two things from our lives.

1. Self-advancement must go. Our natural inclination in this world is the advancement of self. Before we do something, we want to know, "What's in it for me?" "If I take that job, if I move to that city, if I make that friend, if I put that money in the offering, what will I get out of it?" But God says, "Don't be locked into that kind of thinking. Don't let the world squeeze you into the mold of self-advancement."

Also...

2. Self-indulgence must go. The spirit of this age is to seek for immediate personal gratification. And sadly, a lot of Christians think this way as much as their unsaved neighbors. Have you ever heard anyone say, "I'm thinking of leaving this church, and going to another one because this one doesn't meet my needs." As though the only reason for ever going to church is to have your needs met. That's the world's thinking. To think that way is to be worldly, regardless of whether one smokes or drinks or plays cards.

My friend, a dedicated life is a transformed life. If we are truly motivated by mercy, we will reject the world's pattern. But that's only half of the process of transformation. You'll notice in verse 2, the negative is followed by a positive.

B. We must accept the will of God. "But be transformed by the renewing of your mind. Then you will be able to test and approve what God's will is--his good, pleasing and perfect will." There are two processes that must go on everyday in our lives. Renouncing and renewal. Putting off and putting on. Not being conformed, but being transformed.

The Greek term for "transformed" comes into English as metamorphosis. The same word appears in the transfiguration narrative. But don't miss this. The word Paul uses indicates a process, not a one time event. We're talking about continual, radical change.

Know this. When you accept the will of God instead of the world's pattern, it will show up in two areas.

1. This will affect your thinking. "How does transformation happen?" you ask. It starts with your mind. "Be transformed by the renewing of your mind."

What kind of things are you taking into your mind? That's the issue. What are you listening to, reading, and watching? What do you think about in a day's time?

May I offer a familiar challenge as we embark on a new year? If we are serious about transformation, we need a consistent intake of the Word of God. It won't just happen either. Let me recommend a plan, a schedule for reading through the Bible in a year.

By reading two to three chapters from the Old Testament in the morning, and one chapter from the New Testament in the evening, you will fill your mind with the entire Word of God in twelve months (reading schedules are available). If you're not a reader and that venture sounds too challenging, start by reading just through the New Testament. Fill your mind with God's truth one chapter a day.

Is there anything magical about Bible reading? No. But if you do it consistently with a heart that's motivated by mercy, something amazing will happen. You'll get to know better the God of mercy.

Friends, the Word of God will change your life. It will transform you.

Furthermore, if you accept the will of God instead of the world's pattern, it will show up in another area. First, your thinking, then...

2. This will affect your choices. You see, our guide for choices is not the world's pattern, but the will of God—his good, pleasing and perfect will.

The world says, "Get more and more." God's will says, "It's more blessed to give than to receive (Acts 20:35)."

The world says, "Look out for #1." God's will says deny yourself and follow Christ (Matt. 16:24).

The world says, "He who dies with the most toys wins." God's will says that he who dies to himself wins (1 Pet. 2:24).

The world says, "Never let anyone take advantage of you." God's will says, "Turn the other cheek (Mt. 5:39)."

The world says, "Eat, drink, and be merry." God's will says, "Seek first the kingdom of God (Mt. 6:33)."

The world says, "Look within yourself for your answers." God's will says we should look to Christ, who alone is the answer (Col. 2:3).

I read a true story that illustrates what happens when a person is motivated by mercy. It's about the opera singer Jerome Hines.³ As a trained and talented musician, Hines became possessed with a desire to become a star in the Metropolitan Opera Company. That's what he lived for. He gave up all other pursuits in order to train and achieve his goal. He perfected the arts of intonation, of musical projection, and learned several languages so he could sing operatic roles. And it paid off. He became a star. Except Hines knew that inside he was still hollow and empty.

One day Hines heard a man singing. The voice was as good as his, and the man could have done what he did. It was George Beverly Shea singing...

*I'd rather have Jesus than silver or gold,
I'd rather be His than have riches untold,
I'd rather have Jesus than anything this world affords today.*

God worked in the heart of Jerome Hines. Hines began to think about his life, and became a Christian. But he didn't quit the opera, though many people thought he should have. They thought the opera was "worldly." The opera is not worldly--except to people in opera who think like worldlings and live like worldlings. Yes, Hines stayed in opera, but everything was different. He no longer sang for the advancement of Jerome Hines, but for the glory of God. He dedicated his ability, his talent, his work to his new purpose.

³as told by Ray Stedman, p. 96.

Then came his golden opportunity. The role he had always wanted to sing and for which he had trained for months came. He was given a contract that stated he was to sing this role in the opera for ten years. Ray Stedman tells what happened to Hines⁴:

One day when he went to the opera house to practice for it, he found some people performing a rather lewd dance and was told, 'This is the choreography introducing the opera.' He said, 'There's nothing in the opera like this!' 'No,' they said, 'we're changing it a bit, modernizing it, bringing it up to date.' Hines said, 'I won't sing if you are going to have this kind of dance in it.' He was told he had better go talk to Mr. Bing.

Hines went to Rudolph Bing, general manager of the Metropolitan Opera, and said to him, 'Sir, if you have that dance in the opera I am not going to sing in it.' Bing told him, 'If you don't sing, you will be ostracized and blacklisted in opera. You are under contract to sing.' Hines said, 'Sir, I can't sing in that opera. I am not going to let my name be used to entice people to come in to see filth like this. You can break me, sir, and the union can break me. I've worked hard for months to train for this role, but I will not sing in your opera if that dance is in it.'

Bing said, 'Jerome, you don't have to sing. If you really feel this way, we'll get someone else. But we can't change the contract.' So Hines gave up the role. It cost him, over the period of ten years, something like a hundred thousand dollars." My friend, are you that gripped by mercy? "How can I tell?" you ask...

Make It Personal: Am I motivated by mercy?

Ask yourself a couple of very basic questions.

1. Is it obvious that my body is surrendered to God? Have you settled this fundamental issue of who owns your body? Is your body the Lord's? Is it for real?

He made it. He gave His Son to reclaim it. Do you see it as His?

Perhaps you don't because of a fundamental problem. You're not motivated by mercy because you've never experienced the mercy of God. Have you admitted to God the truth about your sinfulness and just condemnation? And have you, by His undeserved help, accepted His Son as your Savior, placing your total trust in what He did on the cross for you? Have you come to God through Christ and surrendered your body to Him?

If so, is it obvious? Can people see that because you're in the grip of His mercy, your body belongs to Him? That leads to a second question...

2. Is it obvious that my mind is being changed by God? Again, is there evidence? When's the last time someone at school or work said you were crazy, like they said to Jerome Hines? I urge you this year to take steps that will lead to the godly transformation of your mind.

Start with a daily quiet time, reading through the Scriptures. Memorize a Bible passage every month dealing with God's mercy and grace, and meditate on it. Read good books this year, books that stimulate your thinking in godly ways. Such as:

Jerry Bridges', The Pursuit of Holiness

John Piper's, Desiring God, or perhaps, When I Don't Desire God

Or a good biography, like Eric Metaxas's Bonhoeffer, or Amazing Grace (the story of William Wilberforce)

Let's not coast in 2014. Let's take steps this year to show that our bodies and minds truly are motivated by mercy.
